there is so deep, the outside factions are so extreme and there is so much general bitterness that it will be at least four years before Yale gets a proper system started, and then four years more before this system reaches the winning stage. It will be eight years before Yale can beat Harvard without having far better material in every way, something, of course, which might take place any one year."

The Harvard writer is evidently figuring back to Haughton's start, where even this redoubtable coach needed four years to get his system under full swing. For after Haughton arrived it was four years before he scored a touchdown against Yale, although in that period he was beaten only once. Since the installation of the Haughton system fifteen years ago Yale has beaten Harvard only twice. Before that Harvard was beaten by Yale about once every ten years,

The situation makes Mr. Charles Harvey exceedingly sad.

Wells is wel'erweight champion of Great Britain, where he knocked over all the best men in his class. He came here in search of employment about a year ago, but has been utterly unable to find it. He has never been seen in a local ring except once, at Madison Square Garden, when he boxed for charity and received nothing in the way of remuneration.

Some efforts have been made by local matchmakers to find an opponent for "Bermondsey" Billy, but the American welterweights evidently thought he was too rough and flatly refused to mix with him. Billy has been trumpeting a challenge in the direction of Mickey Walker, the Elizabeth boy who recently won the world's welterweight title from Jack Britton, but Mickey is apparently as hard of hearing as are the rest of the lads in this class.

The Boxing Commission has fathered a rule that a champion must defend his title once in every six months. This, in fact, was one of the board's pet regulations for a while. The rule, which was calculated to put life in various dormant divisions, was unquestionably a good one, but it was never sufficiently enforced.

Personally we have never seen "Bermondsey" Billy Wells in action and we are not in a position to say how good he really is. The Tribune holds no brief for him, but it would seem that it would be only fair play to give the bar prisend scrap puts up the bar of the see scrap puts up the bar of

For ten years now he has been supreme over all amateurs and all professionals, with no one strong enough to break through the barrier he has erected.

There are perhaps those contemplating new golf resolutions for the course just ahead, and for these we offer the following suggestions in rounding out their list

2. That in thinking through the nattoke I will think of nothing but hit ting the ball, once I have taken my stance.
